Programme overview

Six original lessons explain attachment as a relationship construct, temperament and context, emotion regulation, play and peer relationships, belonging and respectful interpretation. Fictional worked cases culminate in a self-assessed social-participation capstone. 6 self-paced written English lessons with original fictional cases, applied exercises, explained answers and a self-assessed capstone. Optional automated Course Tutor assistance is available in the protected LMS. Readings are AI-authored with AI editorial and source checks; independent human academic review is not included. For adult learners aged 18 or over. Independent ZELVU educational study support only. No university degree, university credit, recognised professional qualification, clinical or special-educator licence, diagnosis, therapy, supervised placement or research ethics approval is included. Live human teaching, individual marking, a recorded lecture series, external textbook licences and proprietary assessment instruments are not included. All course exercises use supplied fictional cases; no real-child observation, testing or data collection is required or authorised. The same learning material is included in Child & Adolescent Psychology - MA Study Support (Non-degree). Choose this specialist course or the combined programme; separate specialist purchases are unnecessary if you buy the combined programme. The combined purchase does not grant separate specialist course entitlements. Existing related courses are sold separately.
